Macy unclipped the cage door. She pulled it open and she smiled as a cloud of hens exploded into the yard. With much feather shaking and squawking they settled down to eat the dinner scraps Macy had scattered for them. As usual, the red hen took charge, grabbing the best scraps, pecking at any hen that dared get in its way, flapping and fussing this way and that.

“Why do the other hens let the red hen boss them like that?” Macy had asked her mother.

“Hens have a pecking order,” her mother explained. “The bravest and strongest hen is in charge. She can peck all the other hens, but no one can peck her. The next hen in the pecking order can peck everyone, except the top hen and so it goes all the way down, so you feel really sorry for the poor hen at the bottom. Hens like a bossy leader.”

But Macy had a different view. Every night she had to lock the hens back in their cage so that foxes and owls did not get them. This was her job. Everyone in her large family had jobs. By the time it was getting dark, all the hens were happy to go back into their cage. That is, all except the red hen. She would pretend to walk towards the cage door, and at the last minute would suddenly rush to the side and wait for Macy to chase her.

Another trick was to sit in the middle of the yard. As soon as Macy got close enough to bend down and pick her up, the hen would flap her wings really hard so Macy could not grab her, then she would run off again. Eventually, after the red hen had decided that Macy had chased her enough, she would calmly walk into the cage by herself, her little red eyes gleaming in triumph as Macy slammed the cage door behind her.

Macy had tried to lure the red hen by putting her favorite food inside the cage at night, but the hen would not be bribed. Macy had tried banging pot lids together to frighten the red hen, but she scared the other hens so much they did not lay any eggs for two days.

Macy went to find her father. “I need to teach that red hen a lesson,” she said. “I’m going to leave her out all night to fight the foxes and the owls. That will teach her to go in her cage when I say.”

The Crocodile's Toothache

The Crocodile
Went to the dentist
And sat down in the chair,
And the dentist said, "Now tell me, Sir,
Why does it hurt and where?"
And the Crocodile said, "I'll tell you the truth,
I have a terrible ache in my tooth,"
And he opened his jaws so wide, so wide,
That the dentist, he climbed right inside,
And the dentist laughed, "Oh isn't this fun?"
As he pulled the teeth out, one by one.
And the Crocodile cried, "You're hurting me so!
Please put down your pliers and let me go."
But the dentist laughed with a Ho Ho Ho,
And he said, "I still have twelve to go-
Oops, that's the wrong one, I confess,
But what's one crocodile's tooth more or less?"
Then suddenly, the jaws went SNAP,
And the dentist was gone, right off the map,
And where he went one could only guess...
To North or South or East or West...
He left no forwarding address.
But what's one dentist, more or less?
